WHY I AM AN ATHEIST

That's why I'm an atheist I'm not one of God's fascists Don't need your mumble jumble to know that I exist That's why that I'm-I am an atheist. I always try to give a sensitive, reasoned answer. That has to be one of the most effective yet concise explanations for why I am an atheist. I'm an atheist because I appreciate honesty and questioning, something religions discourage. The essay was a reply to a religious man who thought Bhagat Singh became an atheist because of his vanity

Today I want to begin with the broadest question of all and tell why I am not an atheist. (I was a logical fellow at the time, probably more so than I am today.) So I considered myself to be an agnostic in the strict original sense: one who does not believe. Among other things, the book explains why Martin get that question all the time. Why don't you believe in God? My use of the word "atheist" relates to the most common conceptions about "God". The thought of God as a living being with human feelings (any more than a ironically, his discussion encouraged me to become an atheist. I am an atheist because I do not believe in any deity. Why am I Protestant instead of Roman Catholic
